

Global Matters Weekly

21 September 2026

Back to basics Gabby Byron

Source: Momentum Global Investment Management, Bloomberg Finance L.P. Data as at 17 September 2026.

What does the chart show?

This chart shows the US 10-year Treasury yield, which has risen above 5% for the first time since 2023 (and closed at its highest level in 19 years), and the oil price, which has climbed towards $110 per barrel amid renewed geopolitical tensions and concerns over supply disruption in the Middle East. While artificial intelligence continues to attract significant attention from investors, movements in bond yields and energy prices have remained important drivers of asset market returns. Technology shares have been under pressure, reflecting a combination of factors. Higher bond yields have weighed on valuations by increasing the discount rate applied to future earnings, while ongoing debate about the opportunities and risks associated with artificial intelligence has also contributed to investor uncertainty. Meanwhile, government bond prices have fallen as investors reassess the outlook for inflation and interest rates following the Fed's latest rate increase. Higher oil prices have added to concerns that inflationary pressures could prove more persistent than previously expected.

Why this is important

Markets often become captivated by transformative themes and breakthrough technologies. However, shorter-term market performance is often shaped by changes in economic conditions, inflation expectations and interest rates. A 5% Treasury yield raises the hurdle rate against which all assets are measured. When investors can earn relatively attractive returns from government bonds, riskier assets need to offer greater compensation for the additional uncertainty they carry. This can be particularly challenging for sectors where valuations depend heavily on future growth expectations. Meanwhile, oil prices approaching $110 per barrel matter because energy remains a key input across the global economy. Higher energy costs can feed through to transportation, manufacturing and household spending, increasing the risk that inflation remains elevated. The Fed's latest rate increase reflects concerns that inflationary pressures may prove more persistent than previously expected.

Recent market movements highlight the continuing importance of macroeconomic fundamentals. Changes in interest rates, inflation expectations and energy prices remain key drivers of financial conditions and can have a significant influence on asset prices. For investors, this serves as a reminder that even during periods of rapid technological change, economic fundamentals remain central to market behaviour.

Global Matters Weekly

21 September 2026

For more information, please contact your adviser or alternatively contact:

Belvest Investment Services Limited
研富投資服務有限公司
9th Floor, Centre Mark II
305-313 Queen's Road Central
Sheung Wan, Hong Kong

Tel +852 2827 1199
Fax +852 2827 0270
belvest@bis.hk
www.bis.hk

Important notes

This communication is issued by Belvest Investment Services Limited and/or Belvest related companies (collectively, and individually Belvest) solely to its clients, qualified prospective clients or institutional and professional investors. Unless stated otherwise, any opinions or views expressed in this communication do not represent those of Belvest. Opinions or views of any Belvest company expressed in this communication may differ from those of other departments or companies within Belvest, including any opinions or views expressed in any research issued by Belvest. Belvest may deal as Distributor or Agent, or have interests, in any financial product referred to in this email. Belvest has policies designed to negate conflicts of interest. Unless otherwise stated, this e-mail is solely for information purposes.

This message may contain confidential information. Any use, dissemination, distribution or reproduction of this information outside the original recipients of this message is strictly prohibited. If you receive this message by mistake, please notify the sender by reply email immediately.

Unless specifically stated, neither the information nor any opinion contained herein constitutes as an advertisement, an invitation, a solicitation, a recommendation or advise to buy or sell any products, services, securities, futures, options, other financial instruments or provide any investment advice or service by Belvest.

No representation or warranty is given as to the accuracy, likelihood of achievement or reasonableness of any figures, forecasts, prospects or return (if any) contained in the message. Such figures, forecasts, prospects or returns are by their nature subject to significant uncertainties and contingencies. The assumptions and parameters used by Belvest are not the only ones that might reasonably have been selected and therefor Belvest does not guarantee the sequence, accuracy, completeness or timeliness of the information provided herein. None of Belvest, its group members or any of their employees or directors shall be held liable, in any way, for any claims, mistakes, errors or otherwise arising out of or in connection with the content of this e-mail.

This e-mail and any accompanying attachments are not encrypted and cannot be guaranteed to be secure, complete or error-free as electronic communications may be intercepted, corrupted, lost, destroyed, delayed or incomplete, and/or may contain viruses. Belvest therefore does not accept any liability for any interception, corruption, loss, destruction, incompleteness, viruses, errors, omissions or delays in relation to this electronic communication. If verification is required please request a hard-copy version. Electronic communication carried within the Belvest system may be monitored.